The structures treated of represent the commonest types of railway bridges, and were chosen because they seemed best suited to illustrate the problems which occur most frequently to the bridge designer. They include the following: a 60-ft. Deck Plate-Girder, a 100-ft. Deck Warren Girder, a 150-ft. Through Pratt Truss, a 200-ft. Through Pratt Truss with curved top chord, a 170-ft. Swing Bridge, and a Railway Viaduct. At the outset, a general specification has been given governing the loads, unit stresses, and such other details as require the attention of the designer. This is followed by tables for the permissible unit stresses in columns, and for the rivet values used in the designs. The author has found the moment-diagram to be the most satisfactory method of dealing with wheel-loads, as it affords a rapid and reliable solution, and significant errors are less likely to occur with its use than with that of any form of moment table. The designs of the different structures are then considered in detail. Commencing with the main dimensions of the structure to be designed, and stating the loads which it has to carry, the stresses in the various members are first determined. The dimensions of...
