Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Ancient History Syllabus: For Secondary Schools In 1916 the Committee on History in Schools of the American Historical Association requested the New England History Teachers Association to prepare a fuller definition of the requirements in Ancient History. A committee was appointed and this syllabus is the result of its work. This syllabus is intended to serve as a logical outline and guide for both student and teacher. It also serves to emphasize the main topics and furnishes a perspective of the entire course. It contains a series of topics, a brief analysis of the points involved in each of these topics, and, what is perhaps the most valuable feature of the syllabus, suggestions as to the teaching points to be kept in mind by the instructor. A brief bibliography for teachers and a selected list of books for students aim to bring the reader in touch with recent literature. Numerous references to source material and secondary works are included in the outline. These references represent the judgment of many teachers. Where possible the student should be supplied with a copy of the syllabus. If conditions are such that this is not feasible, the teacher may dictate such a portion of the syllabus as is necessary for the daily lesson. Too much importance cannot be attached to the study of geography. Nothing serves better to anchor history than an exact knowledge of the location of cities, battles, boundaries, etc. A study of physiography will be found of great assistance in understanding the forces which have molded history.
