Our custom of meeting the last Friday evening in the month has rarely been deviated from in all these years, and with very few notable exceptions the Club has refrained from entertaining guests. Truly, it has been shown that the Club is resourceful. Al Levy gives personal attention to arranging the commissary for our outings, and spends several days away from his own business, for all of which he makes no charge. The custom of having cocktails before our dinners originated years ago. Those who attended will remember when we used to meet in a long, narrow room, created by opening doors of several smaller rooms in the upstairs part of Jerry Illich's old place on North Main Street. It was a dreary night...
